WHIPPING A DAUGHTER -The usually quiet little village of Harlemville, in Hinsdale, N. Y., has been thrown into a great ferment of excitement for the past few days, and what the ultimate result may be it is now impossible to say, The particulars are thus narrated by the Hudson Register:

"A clergyman of that village possesses a daughter some fifteen years of age, of prepossessing appearance, lady-like habits, and refined culture of mind. In the same rustic village resides a young gentleman of good family, and in all respects an equal to the lady in social standing. A tender affection, something more endearing than friendship, as the story goes, sprung up between the twain, and they frequently took clandestine walks through the romatic suburbs of the village.

One of these felicitous and innocent rambles took place last Thursday evening, on the way to prayer meeting, and was unfortunately dis covered by the clergyman. But he conducted the ceremonies of worship as calmly as though nothing unusual had occurred, restraining his seclusion of his own home.

On the following day, Friday, as our informant states, the pions and devoted father procured a birch twig, such as many of our And HATS, in Croquets, Promenades, Fleetreaders, in their juvenile days, have seen, or wings, Henriettas, and Sontagrather felt, in the hands of the country pedagogues. With this weapon the loving and Pendants and Ornaments. pious parent whipped his daughter most unmercifully.

When the occurrence became known in the neighborhood, the indignation and excitement was intense, as might well be inferred. The Dyed. girl's lover, the young gentleman who had been the innocent cause of the wrath of the father and the suffering of the girl, naturally resolved to rescue her from her unnatural parent, and become her lawful protector. Accordingly arrangements were secretly made, and last Sunday morning the lady left her home ostensibly for the purpose of attending church. But her lover awaited her at a secluded corner with a carriage suitable for the friends. occasion. They met unobserved by outsiders, and drove rapidly to the neighboring village, where, at about the hour the cruel parent was pronouncing his morning benediction upon his flock, the lovers were united "in the holy bands of matrimony.' At the conclusion of the church services the clergyman missed his daughter, and on making inquiries ascertained she was at the house of a neighbor. He proceeded thither, but instead of meeting a crouching and helpless girl, was confronted by her husband, who exhibiting his marriage certificate, gave the parent to understand that the lady was under his care and protection, and he should allow no intrusion, and po further use of the birch twig on that victim!

The teelings of the "fond parient," at that moment, can be better imagined than described. Suffice it to say, the excitement still rages, and the sequel remains to be written.'

MELANCHOLY DEATH. -Ida Virginia Jones an interesting little girl of four years old, daughter of Mr. James H. Jones, was accidentally shot and killed by her brother, a child of six years of age, on Saturday last. The gun was an old one that had been lying around for a length of time; it was without a hammer, and was not known to be loaded. Under these circumstances it was not considered necessary to place it beyond the reach of the children, and on the occasion referred to the little fellow was playing with it. It is said, by some, that he struck the cone with a hammer, and by others that he fell and struck the cone against some hard substance which caused an explosion.
But be that as it may, the load was lodged in the little girl, his sister, who died the little girl, his sister, who died the little girl, his sister, who died the little girl his sister. the head of the little girl, his sister, who died in a half hour after the accident. The charge had entered the brain and medical aid was unavailing. The explosion attracted the attention of both parents, and Mrs. Jones, who was sick abed, it is said, rose hastily and rushed to her dying child, and on reaching the spot, and seeing the condition of her little girl, fell fainting to the floor, and was recovered with difficulty .- Norfolk Day Book.

A REMARKABLE INVENTION .- All the processes for preserving the bodies of the dead now in use are likely to be superseded by a newly invented burial case, by means of which the remains of a deceased person may be kept unchanged for an indefinite period. The value of this discovery has been fully tested at the Bellevue Hospital, where, under the direction of Professor Doremus, a corpse already commencing to decompose was placed in one of these cases, where it remained unchanged for ers is called. forty days. At the expiration of that time it was exposed to the air, and up to the present period (30 days from the date of exposure,) the body has been thoroughly preserved from decomposition, no smell being perceptible.—
New York World.

METEOROLOGICAL .- A friend told us on Saturday, that he knew of an old farmer in the country who has had a standing bet of $10 with a neighbor, for the last thirty years, that of each year. During the time he has won twenty-seven out of the thirty have twenty-seven out of the thirty bets, winning, of course, again on Saturday. We do not know upon what meteorological data the old gentleman bases his calculations, but if the above statement be true, they would appear to above statement be true, they would appear to the times, at be almost intaliable .- Lymchburg News.
